The Department of Biotechnology/Life Sciences at Pachhunga University College organized a Farmers' Training Program on March 27-28, 2025, at the PUC Seminar Hall, focusing on "Natural Farming: Opportunities and Challenges", sponsored by ICAR-NBAIM Mau. A total of 60 farmers from 19 villages participated in the training. The sessions covered essential aspects of natural farming, including requirements, necessities, and problem-solving strategies. Silpauline, mushroom seeds and blocks, and 16-liter backpack battery sprayers were distributed to all attendees to support the participants. The training successfully equipped farmers with practical knowledge and resources to enhance their farming practices.
