INDEPENDENCE DAY SPECIAL LECTURE- 2023

Hon. Capt. Thanchhuma Colney

---

The 18th of August 2023: A function in observance of the Independence Day was held on 2:00 p.m., 18th August (Friday), at the Golden Jubilee Hall, organised by the Dept. of Sociology, Pachhunga University College. The function was graced by Honourable Captain, Thanchhuma Colney, as a Chief Guest. The function was held through Google Meet in online mode. Assistant Professor Dr. Laldinpuii Ralte gave a welcome speech briefly introducing about the chief guest, mentioning that he was the father of our respected Head Of Department, Sociology Dr. Lalbiakzuali Colney. The function was attended by the 1st, 3rd and 5th semester including some of the former students of the Dept. of Sociology.

The Chief Guest, Capt. Thanchhuma Colney gave a speech highlighting about his career, the ups and downs, the uncertainties he had been through along his journey. He inspired the students to work hard and not give up on our dreams. He said that each and every individual has the capability to become a Captain like himself, if we believe in ourselves and work really hard. He taught the students about loving our own country.

After the speech was over, a question was raised from the students, asking about which is the best subject to become a captain like him. He said that every subject is good, but for women Education subject is the best suitable subject and many of the successful women in his line are from Education Department. He encouraged us to dedicate and commit ourselves more to achieving and acquiring many more heights for ourselves and the country.

The vote of thanks was proposed by Asst. Prof. Dr. Lalhmingmawii, Department of Sociology, Pachhunga University College. The former Assistant Class Representative and former NCC S.U.O, Sarah Lalthanhlui conducted the National Anthem, the audience stood in attention and sung the anthem.

A light refreshment was then provided by the department.

It was an evening to remember.
