The Department of Sociology, Pachhunga University College organized a special lecture on the life of Honorary Captain Thanchhuma Colney during his days of serving the country, on behalf of Independence Day. The Chairman started the programme at 2:05 p.m. with a warm welcome to the resource person and introduce him to the students and faculties through google meet since he could not join us in person as he is currently residing in Shillong.

The resource person, Honorary Captain Thanchhuma Colney begins his speech at 2:20 p.m. , introduces himself and move on with the journey of his life and experiences. He emerged from a poor family, spending most of his childhood in the fields and helping out his parents. His desire to serve the country then inspired him to join the army, struggling through difficulties and obstacles, enduring the pain and humiliations. After much adversities, he managed to join the army and advanced to higher positions, eventually securing the title of Honorary Captain. His journey as a soldier was matched with courage and unwavering devotion, his desire to serve the country was finally accomplished.

After his speech, the Chairman gave time for the students to interact with him and asked questions. Several students came up with their questions and clarify their doubts. He advised them to maintain self-discipline and encourage them to value hardwork, he wished the students to achieve their goals in life.

The programme was then concluded at 2:50 p.m. by a vote of thanks from Assistant Professor Lalhmingmawii, Department of Sociology. A photo session was conducted for all the attendees followed by distribution of refreshment.
